PHOSPHORUS — NITROGEN — POTASSIUM — CALCIUM — MAGNESIUM

Fertile soils are one of your best weapons against costly erosion. Soil getting enough fertilizer produces vigorous, high-yielding crops — crops that furnish thick plant cover to reduce runoff.

Liberal use of fertilizer can cut soil and water losses in half. Include an adequate fertilizing plan in your conservation program.

ELECTRICITY— Your Silent Hired Hand

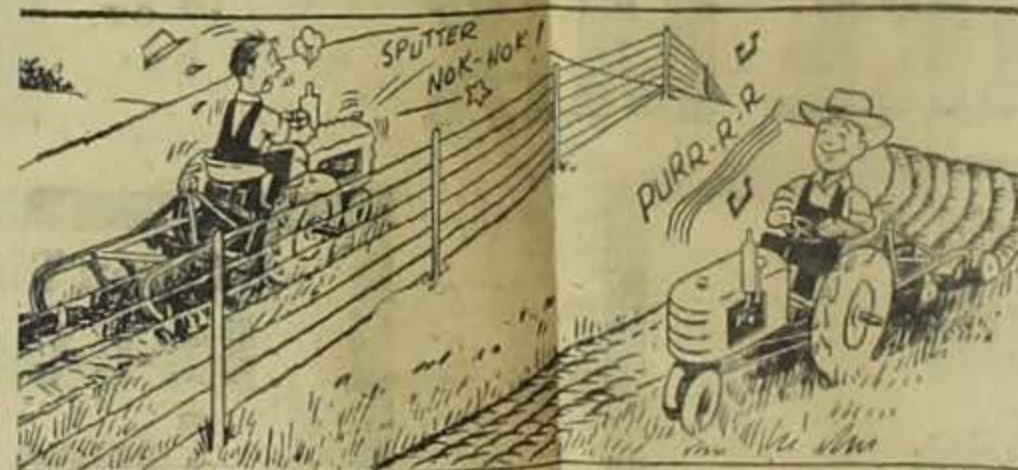

It is important to put electricity to its best use on the farm. It is just as important to practice soil conservation. Farming today requires planning. It means planning your electrical system so that it will do the most for you. It means planning your crop rotation so that your farm land itself will do most for you. DON'T LET POOR WIRING STEAL YOUR KILOWATT HOURS.

WET FIELDS MEAN LOW PROFIT

Low spots that drown out year after year can be discouraging land to farm . . .

Even if water doesn't stand long enough to kill crops, clogged-up soil will prevent top yields.

Teamed up with good soil conservation, your tile system can give top service for years.

Stop in and explain your drainage problems today. We provide the best in drainage.

A Feeding Program

THAT REDUCES FEED COSTS

A modern breeding to-market feeding program can cut total feed costs 10 per cent and increase farm profits up to $5 per pig marketed. This fact is backed by research with thousands of pigs at Iowa State University.

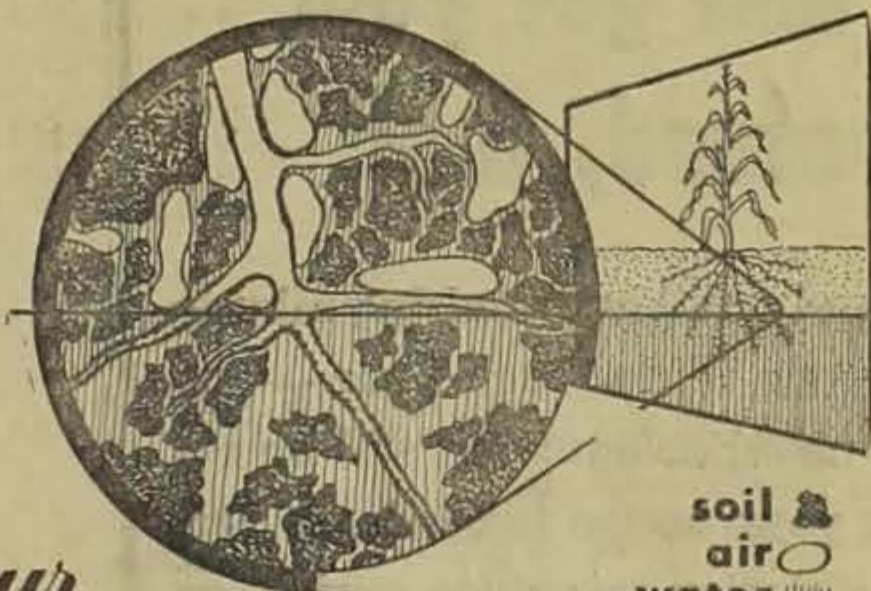

A sound, cost-cutting life-cycle feed plan begins with the feeding of the sow before she is bred. It varies to fit the animal's special needs through gestation and lactation. Then it adapts to the pre-starter, starter-growing and growing-finishing periods for the pigs. Try the Felco Way!
