Iowa Insect Threat

Gunderson Points Out 1968 Dangers

By BOB SOGARD
Hawk-Eye Farm Editor

Dr. Harold "Tiny" Gunderson came to Iowa in 1958 because he was offered a job at Iowa State University, as an assistant extension entomologist. Since then he has made a career of chasing bugs.

"I arrived at the same time as the worst drought in Iowa's history," Gunderson said. "The next year there were 100 grasshoppers per square yard in the fence rows, and still they were green. This has never ceased to amaze me," declared the extension entomologist.

He was in Burlington last week as a member of ISU's ace 3-man team of specialists in bugs and weeds. The other member is Dr. E. P. "Dutch" Sylwester, extension botanist and plant pathologist. They conducted insect and weed control clinics for more than 400 area farmers and pest control people.

The Situation Now

Gunderson said weather last year was unfavorable for both broods of European corn borer. The overwintering population is the lowest since 1959. "There is no worry about the first brood and the second depends on weather. We will be advised," he said.

• Sports

"That's the U.S. government for about 12 seconds," he quipped.

Bugs

ALL EYES are on "Tiny" Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State University, who answers a question from Don Schroh of Ale-do, Ill., at right. Schroh has 220 acres in continuous corn. Interested onlookers aren't identified.

Weeds

Weedy Year Tribute Told

"Last year our corn had wet that the stem was 10 feet, cold feet and weeds were everywhere."

Big Bollworm Discovery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has gotten the new year off to a good start with an important scientific discovery.

Only the department doesn't seem to know it.

By Dick West

The real enemy of cotton is economic salvation. The South shall rise again!

When a farmer plants a cotton crop he shouldn't try to keep down the bollworms as in the past. He should try to make it easy for bollworms to thrive, spread and proliferate.

Then, at harvest time, instead of picking the cotton, he picks the bollworms.

Natural Supply

A couple of agricultural researchers have found that a synthetic chemical widely used in commercial insect repellants "occurs naturally in" bollworms.

The chemical is this. They 1. the chemical, was strictly stance. But when do bollworms was 1 fever mosquito were as effective they are by the lat.

Potential Vane

This news was released matter-of-factly in a routine announcement with no mention of its vast significance. A good deed for like is.
