Carried First Mail to Waterloo

1913

Interesting Story From Pen of Octogenarian—Resident of Iowa for 79 Years—Traveled Cedar Valley When it Was a Wilderness—Establishment of First Postoffice in County—Various Experiences of Pioneer Days.

Editor Courier: I will endeavor to contribute a few lines of history of my pioneer days as near as I can recall them.

My father, L. P. Luck, came to Iowa in 1832, locating at Dubuque, which was then an Indian village with a few log cabins. He was a wagon maker by trade and as there was no work in his line, he moved back to Bowling Green, Mo., where I was born in the Year 1833. In the spring of 1834 our family moved to Bellevue, Jackson county, Iowa, and lived there a while, then moved back to Dubuque where father died in 1852. He was credited with making the first wagon built in Iowa.

Becomes Pony Mail Carrier.

In 1850 I strayed off down to Cedar Rapids and hired out to David King, Esq., to carry mail by horseback to Cedar Falls. There was no stage line and nothing but an Indian trail from Vinton to Cedar Falls. Vinton was called Fremont at that time and had no postoffice and Vinton was about four miles east of there. A man by the name of Keys was postmaster. They moved the postoffice up to Fremont and still called it Vinton. There was another postoffice in the state by the name of Fremont so they changed the name to Vinton. There wasn't a house on the town plat of Vinton but old man Beckett lived down at the mouth of Hinkle creek and he was postmaster. Two miles up the river from Vinton lived a settler by the name of Dan Harris; the next house on the trail was Charles Mullan's.

Meeting With First Settlers.

The first man I met in Black Hawk county was George W. Hanna and the next man was Squire E. D. Adams who lived about two miles above Hanna's. The third man was Dempsey Overman of Sturgis Rapids, later Cedar Falls. There was only one log cabin in Cedar Falls and Mr. Overman couldn't keep me over night, so I returned to Squire Adams' and staid with him during the four years that I carried the mail. Overman was first postmaster at Cedar Falls and the office was established in January, 1850, according to a history of Black Hawk county published in 1878. I came up there the first part of July, 1850, and delivered the mail to Mr. Overman. The county history referred to also states that Thomas W. Case was the first mail carrier. I did not know Case and he must have carried the mail from Quasqueton. Both routes commenced the first day of July, 1850. Dr. Guthrie contracted to carry the mail from Quasqueton to Cedar Falls for four years and he got lost on his first trip and couldn't find the postoffice; he returned to Quasqueton and the next week he found his way to Cedar Falls. He told me this himself. It is possible that he let the route to Mr. Case. I do not know about this as I delivered the mail to Cedar Falls Tuesdays and the mail carrier from Quasqueton delivered his on Thursdays, so we never saw each other. I made the trip from Cedar Rapids to Cedar Falls weekly. It took four days if there was no blizzard or high water. Sometimes it took all the week to make the trip. Mr. King, the contractor to whom I hired out, got $300 a year, and the first year I carried the mail he gave me $8 a month. I got a little raise each year. Everything was cheap then. Men on a farm got from $8 to $12 a month. Land was $1.25 per acre anywhere.

A postoffice was established at Miller's Creek and named Eliza and George Ellis was appointed postmaster. Another postoffice was established on Mullan's hill called Waterloo. Charles Mullan selected the name for it and was appointed postmaster, and I delivered the mail to him at his log house.

Platting of Waterloo.

When the committee of three who selected the location of the county seat of Black Hawk county looked over Mullan's ford, generally known as Prairie Rapids crossing and later Waterloo, it was the most central point in the county but they said it was no place for a town so they located it at Cedar Falls. John H. Brooks lived at Cedar Falls. He bought a town lot, built a house and sold liquor. When he sold his property, the lot owners declined to sell him another lot unless he would agree in the deed that he would not sell liquor on the premises conveyed. He refused to do this and informed them that he would go down the river a ways and start a town of his own. He came down to Mr. Chas. Mullan's and they talked it over and with George W. Hanna, Lewis Hall-ock, J. R. Pratt, James Vinton and E. M. Cooley, platted the town of Waterloo. They gave everybody a lot that would build on it. In the year 1854 there was one store and one place that a man could stay all night. I think all the houses were log cabins at that time. In 1850, when I began carrying mail, there were twenty-six families in Black Hawk county and the total number of white inhabitants was 135. The first tavern that I can recall in Waterloo was owned by the Widow Cantonwine and her son, Sam. The first doctor I remember was Dr. Buffon and Nelson Fancher was the first store keeper. I forded the Black Hawk creek as there were no bridges in those days.

A Hunter's Paradise.

There were plenty of deer, elk and wolves in those days. I never saw any buffalo, they were further west. I saw elk only occasionally but I think I never made a trip without seeing deer and wolves. A mighty hunter by the name of King lived down the river near the Benton county line. Some men met him on Rock Creek one day and told him they had seen a bear on Big Creek. He started after it and returned later with some meat which he said was bear meat. Everybody wanted a taste of bear but those who sampled it declared it was tough and it later turned out that he had been unable to find the bear and palmed off wolf meat on them. Green head flies, buffalo gnats and mosquitoes were so thick some days in the summer that I could hardly keep my horse on his feet, he wanted to roll all the time.

Desperadoes Troublesome.

There was not much news in those days. Most of the emigrants were on their way to California to hunt gold. In the fall of 1850 George Ellis took up a claim down on Miller's creek, and I used to stop there and get my dinner. The next summer the Way brothers, desperadoes, whom the old pioneers will remember, stole Mr. Ellis's cattle. He followed them to Henry county and got his cattle back. The Way brothers were back in Black Hawk county as soon as Mr. Ellis was. He wanted to shoot them but his brother-in-law, Hampton, wouldn't let him. When Chas. Mullan and his family were on the Cedar making sugar one spring the Way brothers went through their cabin and stole the quilts and blankets. There was a lot of stealing in those days and it was all laid to the Way brothers and their gang.

The road was lonesome and if any one wanted to go from Vinton to Cedar Falls they would wait until I came along and go with me. George Sanders of Benton county accompanied me on one occasion and after we crossed Miller's creek and came out of the timber, we noticed a man mounted on a grey horse about half a mile ahead of us. George suggested that we travel a little faster and catch up with him, so we did. We found him to be John Edwards, a notorious horse thief. There was a reward of $50 for him. But he was ready for us and had his gun cocked. George wanted to look at his gun but he said he would be a d—n fool to give up his gun when everybody wanted to capture him. George asked him if he wanted to trade horses and he replied, "I stole this horse and they would take it away from you and you never harmed me." We asked him where he was going and he replied that he intended to leave the country. Just before we reached Mullan's, he turned to the river and crossed at Mullan's ford where the city of Waterloo now is. We hadn't lost a horse thief and let him go and that was the last time he was even seen in the country to my knowledge.

Experience with Bucking Pony.

I was well acquainted with John Melrose, Mrs. Hanna's brother, and often ate dinner at his cabin above the Black Hawk creek between the Mullan and Hanna cabins. I broke a bucking pony for him and it threw me off one day and my foot got caught in the stirrup. I was dragged through the brush for some distance and my clothes torn, but the saddle girth broke and saddle, mail and myself were left in a heap in the brush between the Melrose cabin and Cedar Falls. I followed the pony about a mile and caught him. I never saw John Melrose but once after he moved to Wright county where he was shot but not fatally wounded in a battle with horse thieves. Melrose was a member of a posse pursuing the thieves and with another man by the name of Donaldson was cornered. Donaldson was shot through the lung and died from his wound. Melrose was shot through the neck but recovered.

Wolves Devour Horse.

Bands of Pottawattamie and Musquakie Indians roamed up and down the Cedar river. I often rode a distance with them. They would camp at Cedar Rapids, Vinton and at Newell's between Cedar Falls and Janesville.

In the winter of 1852 a Mr. Cline of Benton county went with me to Cedar Falls to trade a horse for lumber to build a flat boat to enable him to ship corn down the Cedar to St. Louis. His horse was so valuable that he was unable to make the desired exchange, so he started back with me. When we got to Miller's creek, the stream was frozen over and his horse didn't want to go onto the ice. He urged the animal and when it finally jumped it strained its shoulder and got lawer every mile. I staid with him until we crossed Rock creek and it was gettin dark. He told me I had better go on and he would try to get his horse to Dan Harris', some time in the night. He got the animal within four miles of Vinton and left it in a grove and went on to Harris', where he staid all night. When he returned in the morning, he found that the horse had been attacked by wolves and its hind quarters so badly lacerated that he cut its throat with a jack knife, and went home with only the saddle

Cedar Rapids Nearest Market.

I was acquainted with Andrew Mullarkey, Oscar Virden and Jim Virden, who were among the first settlers, and George Philpot, who settled west of Cedar Falls in the fall of 1850. They all went to Cedar Rapids to mill and to do their trading, for there was not a store in Benton or Black Hawk county in 1850 to buy provisions. I carried along with them tobacco and things that I could carry on horseback from Cedar Rapids. When Henry Mellon of Cedar Falls, afterwards a justice of the peace, got married I brought his wedding suit from Cedar Rapids, tied on the back of my saddle.

On one of my trips in the winter time, a blizzard came up and when I reached Ellis' on Miller's creek, at noon, I couldn't see to go any further and I staid there until evening. It cleared up about sun down. A man named Strong and another man were there with two loads of slaughtered hogs on their way to Cedar Falls. When the moon rose we started. The wolves began to howl, attracted, I suppose, by the smell of the pork. We could see them following us. The men had two dogs, but they sneaked under the wagon and we couldn't get them out. When we got near to Mullan's cabin his dogs commenced barking and the wolves retreated. We reached Cedar Falls about midnight.

Marries and Settles Down.

I quit carrying the mail July 1, 1854, and worked at Cedar Rapids until fall. Then I came up to Butler county, got married, our wedding being the first in that county. Ten children were born to us. My wife is still living and our portraits I am sending you to illustrate this article with, were taken quite a number of years ago. We had ten children, thirty-eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

I remember Mrs. Hanna very well. I used to fetch her mail from Cedar Falls on my way back in the morning and she would always give me a little cake of maple sugar.

The pioneers who experienced all the hardships incidental to the settlement of this country have mostly passed beyond and but very few profited in a financial way.

OF HIS FIANCEE.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—W. J. Forferlich, a Fort Dodge, Ia., farmer, shot himself in the head, while his fiancée, Mrs. Mary Brennan, a widow of Cedar Rapids, Ia., held him in her arms. GROUND HOG SAW SHADOW SUN

The ground hog certainly had difficulty yesterday in seeing shadow, and by this same clearer weather will be with at least six more weeks. No one knows what comes during the next month and a half, Waterloo people will have little room for complaint by reason of the quality of weather that preceded. Yesterday the sun shined most of the day and was sufficient strong to make a shadow.

About July 1854, Comfort Williams and a woman he lived with came from about Cedar Rapids and settled in the (Pittsford) Township. Williams had some children that came with him, among whom was a grown up daughter (Susan). A few months after Williams, came Greenbury Luck, also from Cedar Rapids, who soon after, married Miss (Susan) Williams. The wedding took place at Clarksville, and the marriage license was the second one issued in the County. (Clarksville was the Co. Seat at that time). Mr. Williams and the lady that lived with him were guests at the wedding, and perhaps thinking it all together proper and right, procured a license and were joined in marriage the same day. These were the first and second marriages of persons living in the township (Pittsford). Williams and his wife soon after removed to Cedar Falls. Luck and his wife still reside in the southern part of Butler Co.

Greenbury Bright Luck

Greenbury was born at Bowling Green, Mo., Nov. 9, 1833. He was the son of L. P. Luck, a wagon maker by trade, and one of 14 children. His family moved when he was 6 mo. old to Belvue, Jackson county, Iowa and then later to Dubuque where his father died in 1852. L. P. was credited with making the first wagon built in Iowa.

In 1850, Greenbury wandered down to Cedar Rapids and hired out to David King, esq. to carry mail for 4 yrs. by horse back to Cedar Falls. His wages were $8.00 per mo. and he received a small raise each year. He made the trip from Cedar Rapids to Cedar Falls weekly. It took 4 days if there wasn't any blizzards or high water. Sometimes it took all week to make a trip. He forded the rivers because there weren't any bridges then. In 1850 there wasn't any stores in Black Hawk and Benton counties. Cedar Rapids was the nearest store and he used to bring tobacco and things he could carry on horseback to the settlers. He even brought a wedding sunt to Cedar Falls tied to the back of his saddle.

Wild game was plentiful as were wolves. Some men had even claimed they had seen a bear but it was never found. The buffalo were farther west. Green head flies, buffalo gnats and mosquitoes were so thick in the summer he could hardly keep his horse on his feet. He wanted to roll all the time.

Greenbury met and became friends with many of the first settlers in Black Hawk county. He witnessed the beginning of Post offices and towns. In 1850 when he began to carry mail, there were 26 families in Black Hawk county and a population of 135. Land was $1.25 per acre and wages were $8.00 - $12.00 per mo for farm work. He knew the towns when they were but a single cabin, store, or tavern. He watched them grow.

He had many exciting experiences which he liked to tell about. One was about an Indian medicine man. It seems shortly after he started to carry the mail he was taken ill and was left with a terrible cough. He tried everything to get rid of it. On one of his trips an Indian Medicine man joined him and told him he could cure the cough. He dug some roots for him to chew and the cough left in a few hours. The roots had done what several kinds of doctors medicines had failed to do.

Greenbury quit carrying mail July 1 1854. He worked in Cedar Rapids untill fall then came to Butler county.

He was married to Susan Williams in 1854, the being the first marriage in Butler county. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Holbrook at the Clark home in Clarksville. They became the parents of 10 children, a family tree of strong roots and many branches, reaching out to touch many families in New Hartford and the surrounding areas.

He farmed in Beaver township untill 1903, then operated a store in Sinclair for one year. The last 21 yrs. of his life he made his home in New Hartford.

Greenbury passed away at his home in New Hartford Feb 6, 1925 at the age of 91 yrs. He was survived by 7 children, 42 grandchildren and 46 great-grandchildren. Services were.

his intention to become a citizen of the United States. John Palmer and William Glass took like steps toward citizenship the same day. William Gough, a native of England, who had declared his intention in Bremer county, was the first foreigner admitted to full American citizenship in Butler county, which was accomplished on the 6th of October, 1857. Patrick Hayes was the next person naturalized, at the same term of court. Pat was an Irishman.

The first school in the county was opened in a little log cabin at Clarksville, in 1855. The first term was taught by Miss Malinda Searles.

The first sermon preached within the limits of Butler county, was in the fall of 1851, at the house of Malon B. Wamsley, near the present town of Clarksville. The preacher was a Methodist, but his name is lost from memory.

The first lawyer in the county was M. M. Trumbull, now of Chicago. See history of bar.

The first physician in the county was Dr. James E. Walker, a native of Maine. He was county clerk for a number of years; but has long since returned to his native State.

The first marriage license was issued by Judge Palmer to Greenberry Luck and Susan Williams, on November 1st, 1861, and they were married the same day. They were at last accounts living in Beaver township, and had a family of nearly one dozen children. This marriage license precedes all others on the record books in the clerk's office, although two others bear earlier dates. They are given elsewhere.

FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION IN 1857 AT NEW HARTFORD.

The villagers and citizens of the surrounding country felt the necessity of helping to save the Union, so far as manifesting their patriotism was concerned, and on the fourth day of July, 1857, the anniversary of the Nation's independence, was celebrated in grand style. The officers of the day were: Martin Bailey, President; E. S. Shaw, Marshal; Judd Bradley, Assistant Marshal, and Alonzo Converse, Orator.

At this time the subject of moving the county seat from Clarksville was being considerably agitated, and the southern portion of the county were advocating the nomination of Mr. Converse for County Judge, who was known to be favorable to said removal. When it was known that Mr. Converse was to deliver the oration at this celebration, quite a large number from other parts of the county were in attendance to see "what manner of man this removal candidate" was. Everything passed off very pleasantly and patriotically, and those who participated went home feeling in good spirits and that the day had been profitably spent.

Mr. Converse - we will say right here - was elected the following August, and during the campaign promulgated the generally accepted "silver rule" of "Do unto others as they do unto you."

This was the first celebration in the county, so far as the historian can find.

Greenbery Bright Luck — a name to stir the imagination!

Born in 1833 in Bowling Green, Mo., Greenbery Luck moved with his family in the spring of 1834 to Bellevue, Jackson County, Iowa. In the 1850s, he moved to Dubuque.

As he puts it, he then "strayed off down to Cedar Rapids and hired out to David King, Esq., to carry mail by horseback to Cedar Falls."

There was no stage line and nothing but an Indian trail to Vinton. From Vinton, the next house on the trail was that of Charles Mullan.

"THE ROAD was lonesome," Luck remembers, "and if anyone wanted to go from Vinton to Cedar Falls, they would wait and go with me."

There were plenty of deer, elk and wolves in those days, but he never saw buffalo.

The first man he met in Black Hawk County was George W. Hanna, followed by Suire E.D. Adams, who lived about two miles from the Hannas.

"I remember Mrs. Hanna very well," Luck relates. "I used to fetch her mail from Cedar Falls on my way back in the morning and she would always give me a little cake of maple sugar."

The third person he met was Dempsey Overman of "Sturgis Rapids, later named Cedar Falls." Overman was the first postmaster of Cedar Falls when the post office was established in January 1850, where Luck delivered the first mail in July 1850.

The weekly trip from Cedar Rapids to Cedar Falls took four days if there were no blizzards or high water. For this service he received, $8 a month.

Soon another post office was established on Mullan's Hill, later called Waterloo — a name selected by Charles Mullan.

Luck also was acquainted with other early settlers — Andre Mullarky, Oscar and Jim Virden, and George Philpot. Because there were no stores in Black Hawk or Benton counties in 1850, Luck brought them tobacco and other things that could be carried on horseback from Cedar Rapids.

"When Henry Mellon of Cedar Falls got married, I brought his wedding suit from Cedar Rapids tied on the back of my saddle," recalls Luck.

In those days, there were 26 families in Black Hawk County and the population totaled 135.

LUCK QUIT carrying the mail July 1, 1854, and moved to Butler County. He married Susan Williams Nov. 1, 1854 — the first recorded marriage in Butler County.

Ten children, 38 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren were recorded as of January 1913 when Luck recounted his history from his home in New Hartford.

New Hartford Man Brought

New Hartford, Ia., Aug. 7.—
(Special).—Greenbury Luck, pio-to 1854 lived at Cedar Rapids and carried mail horseback from that city to Cedar Falls, is 91 and feels "as mean as ever," he says.

In his easy chair at the home of one of his daughters here recently he reminisced for a newspaperman. It isn't as easy for him to walk about now, nor as simple to carry on conversation as when he began carrying mail at the age of 17.

He made one trip a week with his faithful pony—using two days between Cedar Rapids and Cedar Falls and the same time for the return.

Mr. Luck never had the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the late James Bartleson, 89, who died at Center Point July 30, after a long illness. Mr.
Bartleson drove a mail stage between Waterloo and Center Point from 1850 to 1855, when he established a mercantile business at Center Point. Mr. Luck knew of the mail stage driver, but their routes did not cross, the New Hartford man recalls.

Before a postoffice was established in Waterloo in 1851, leaving Cedar Rapids, Mr. Luck would follow Indian trails up the Cedar to Vinton, a promising locality where the town had been marked out. There he would ford the river and continue to Cedar Falls where he would cross back again.

He recollects that Mr. Bartleson drove his stage between Waterloo and Center Point by way of Quasqueton, which would be more direct than by Vinton.

Mullan Cabin Was Landmark.

Mr. Luck carried mail for David Kirby, a Cedar Rapids man who employed him. When he started his work, the only evidence of Waterloo was the log cabin of Charles Mullan, standing on the hill. From this landmark, it was 30 miles to the cabin of Dan Harris, who lived near Vinton. Between those places there were no dwellings.

The mail carrier packed his food along and had the habit of taking a brief nap after luncheon each day. One time he awakened when only the upper rim of the sun was visible above the horizon.
His horse had been eating grass during the afternoon, but had not strayed, Luck having tied the rein about his ankle to arouse him should the pony attempt to roam too far.

Once he tried fording the Black Hawk, but the result was wet mail and a drenched rider.
The mail sacks were strapped about his shoulders and he had started across on his horse when misfortune befell. He clung to willows and was able to get his mount again.

Three Months' P. O. Revenue 15c.

During Luck's term as carrier, Charles Mullan opened a postoffice and called it Waterloo, Mr.
Luck says. He had an order on this postoffice, but during the first three months of its existence
Mr. Mullan had only 15c to turn over to the government.

"The Indians marked their trails well," the veteran carrier said. "They followed the best route, and the trails were better than the roads today when hundreds of thousands are spent to build and maintain them."

For more than 30 years Mr.
Luck was a farmer in Butler county. In 1856 he went to Beaver Grove and cut a farm out of the woods. There all but one of the 10 children in the family were born. One was born in Cedar Falls, where the Luck family lived for a time. Mr. Luck knew almost all the early settlers in Cedar Falls.

There were seven girls and three boys in the family. Two daughters and one son are deceased.

Unfortunate as Merchant.

From the farm, the Luck family moved to St. Clair, where he kept a store. This venture was ended by a fire which destroyed building and contents.

For 20 years the pioneer mail carrier has resided in New Hartford. Mrs. Luck died four years ago, when more than 80. Mr.
Luck has 49 grandchildren and 52 great grandchildren.

Waterloo's First Postman

He Carried Christmas Mail in 1850

By STAFF WRITER

Waterloo's first Christmas delivery of mail was back in 1850 and it came up the diagonal route from Cedar Rapids.

The postman was only 17 years old but luck was with him all the way because that's who he was: Greenbury Luck.

And he galloped up the diagonal route for a fairly good reason. If you'd just as soon not freeze to death, get lost in a blizzard or get waylaid by wolves and bears, the shortest distance between two points is a straight diagonal.

Four-Day Race

Well, anyway, young Greenbury Luck rode as fast as his horse's legs could carry him and that was a four-day race via Fremont. And that's Vinton these days.

Today Waterloo's postmaster Wayne C. Smith says that the current eight-cent price for those beautiful Christmas stamps is actually cheaper than 125 years ago when it cost 10 cents per ounce to send a letter more than 300 miles.

But young Greenbury Luck was apparently hauling the mail here for about five cents per ounce and earning himself a princely $8 per month.

Blazed New Trail

When teen-ager Luck started mail delivery for Waterloo in 1850, he was blazing a new trail — for white men. There wasn't even a stage line on his route. It was an Indian trail from Fremont (Vinton), via Eliza at Miller's Creek to Mullan's Hill in Waterloo, where Charles Mullan kept the mail at his log house, and finally on to Dempsey Overman, postmaster at Cedar Falls.

The first mail carrier may have begun his career as green as his first name but he was certainly as lucky as his last. He began on July 1, 1850, and worked the route until July 1, 1854, and never was seriously hurt or laid up.

A Few Little Hazards

There were, of course, a few little impediments like buffalo gnats, blizzards, strange Indians, bear, wolves and horse thieves along the way but 17-year-old Luck adhered to the famous motto about rain and dark of night even before it was written.

He had some trouble finding lodging for the night, though. At Cedar Falls there was only one log cabin so he had to ride to Cedar Falls, deliver the mail to Overman and then return to the home of Squire E. D. Adams, who lived midway between Cedar Falls and Waterloo, to stay all night every Tuesday. This was provided, of course, that there was no flood or blizzard. If there was, Luck took a week to deliver the mail.

There wasn't much of it, fortunately. There were only 26 families in Black Hawk County in 1850 with a grand total of 135 white residents. Luck was pleased to discover, too, that nobody wrote many letters. He said it was because everybody was hurrying to California to look for gold.

Luck's road was a lonesome one. Hardier souls than he waited until he came along rather than make the trip alone. Once Luck and a companion rode from Vinton to Waterloo with a horse thief's gun leveled at them. He didn't shoot them and they didn't try to capture him.

Liked Indians, Hated Wolves

Luck got along fine with the bands of Indians he encountered. He often rode a distance with the Potawatamies and Mesquakies. And he brought tobacco from Cedar Rapids to the Mullarkeys and Virdens and Philpots because, until Nelson Fancher and Andrew Mullarkey set up their stores in Waterloo and Cedar Falls, there wasn't one closer than Cedar Rapids. So one trip young Luck found himself hauling along a wedding suit for Henry Mellon, later a Cedar Falls justice of the peace.

Wolves followed his trail, a horse threw him and the mail into the brush along Black Hawk Creek and he often had to hole up at somebody's cabin until the snow quit.

There's no one living today who'd be willing to trade lives with Greenbury Luck, yet he fell in love with a Butler County girl, married her and had 10 children and lived to a ripe old age at New Hartford.

He Was No. 1

Even as a teen-ager, he got along a little better than the mail carrier who delivered from Quasqueton on Thursdays. Both services began that same July day in 1850 but 17-year-old Greenbury used to love to tell the story of the other postman:

"Dr. Guthrie contracted to carry the mail from Quasqueton to Cedar Falls for four years he got lost on his first and couldn't find the way."

Ninety-seven of the town's four hundred buildings, exclusive of barns, they declared, had been built within the preceding eighteen months. The new brick kilns south of town had in the previous year fired 750,000 bricks which sold for five dollars a thousand.

Andrew Mullarky, who sold beer, calicoes, candle molds, rakes, and plows next door to the Winslow House, reported that he had hauled to the pioneer settlement on the Cedar in 1850 a single wagonload of supplies and that in half a decade new settlers had so quickly populated the region that in the year 1855 alone he had sold twenty thousand dollars worth of goods.¹⁰³

The deciding factor in Peter Melendy's choice of Cedar Falls as his permanent residence was the promise of water power, for the village was then the largest milling center in northeastern Iowa west of Dubuque.¹⁰⁴ Although Waterloo had won the bitter county-seat election in 1855, Cedar Falls still retained hope of industrial supremacy. Already in 1856 from the river bank Melendy could count nine water wheels which supplied power for three sawmills, a chair and bedstead factory, and, most conspicuous of all, a new five-story, stone flour mill, recently completed by the J. M. Overman Company.¹⁰⁵ To the Overman mill the pioneers hauled their grain from points as far distant as Eldora, Hampton, and Fort Dodge, returning to log cabins or sod houses on the prairie with a year's supply of flour and meal.¹⁰⁶

Except for the time that Peter Melendy spent on his Bear Grove property until Mrs. Melendy and the children arrived in May, 1857, he made the Winslow House his headquarters. There the stagecoaches brought commercial travelers, prospective settlers, personal guests, and the mail. And on the stoop of the Winslow House in the evening the travel-worn visitors inquired about land and crops and business opportunities while the news-starved residents questioned the newcomers about railroads, the spread of wild-cat banking, and the issues of national politics.

From the Winslow House a stagecoach set out every morning for Waterloo and Cedar Rapids. Early on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday mornings, another stage departed for Fort Dodge and intermediate points by way of Iowa Falls, and on alternate mornings, Sunday excluded, Greenberry Luck picked up his passengers on the Winslow stoop, cracked his whip, and, by way of the old "Ridge Road",¹⁰⁷ headed eastward for Independence and Dubuque. Once a week, weather permitting, a fourth stagecoach crossed on the ferry and turned northward on the old "Dump Road" to Frankfort by way of Janesville and Waverly.

These coaches, jammed with passengers and mail, and the covered wagons, loaded to overflowing with poultry, household goods, and farm tools with perhaps a box of rose roots, herbs, or lily bulbs tucked under the driver's seat, constantly reminded Peter Melendy of the moving panorama of the Main Street of his boyhood in Cincinnati.

Carried First Mail Route

Greenberry Bright Luck, Waterloo Pioneer, Followed Indian Trail in Early Postal Service.

Special to The Register.

WATERLOO, Ia., July 9.—Back in the days when Iowa's "good roads" were Indian trails Greenberry Bright Luck brought the first mail into Cedar Rapids and Waterloo. He lives now in New Hartford.

Greenberry Luck is a pioneer of Iowa. He has lived in the state for eighty-seven and a half years. He came from his birthplace, Bowling Green, Mo., when 6 months old and lived at Dubuque until he was 17.

When he had reached this age he "wandered away" to seek his fortune and landed in Cedar Rapids just about the time preparations were being made to establish a saddle horse mail route to Cedar Falls.

Greenberry Luck took the job and thus brought the first mail into Cedar Falls and a short time later into Waterloo.

"I carried the mail in saddle bags," he says. "The country between Cedar Rapids and Cedar Falls was certainly wild. There was nothing to follow but an Indian trail. Vinton was then called Fremont because its one lone cabin was owned by a man of that name. There were a few cabins where Waterloo and Cedar Falls are today.

"One of the early settlers in Black Hawk county was William Sturgis for whom Cedar Falls was named Sturgis Falls.

"The postoffice at Sturgis Falls was established in 1850 and opened Jan. 2. My route led through Quasqueton."

For four years he made the long horseback journey once a week, four days being required for the trip. After he gave up the mail route he came to Butler county. In 1859 he moved to Beaver Grove (New Hartford) where he was married to Susan Williams. Mr. Luck bears the distinction of being the first man married in Butler county.

Among the early day experiences Mr. Luck likes to tell about is a story of an Indian medicine man.

"Soon after I started to carry the mail," he said, "I was taken sick. My affliction left me with a terrible cough. I tried everything I could to get rid of it. One day when I was making my weekly trip an Indian medicine man fell in beside me. I started to cough and he told me that he could cure me. As we rode along he watched the ground along the trail and finally dismounted. He dug around in the weeds and grass for a few minutes, then handed me a bunch of roots. He told me to chew them. I did and the cough left in a few hours. I don't know what kind of roots they were but they sure turned a trick that several kinds of doctor's medicine had not done.

"I like to live over again in thoughts those days when the country was new and when hardy pioneers and their families worked together to establish homes. I believe husbands and wives were happier then, that is the majority of them.

"People were more sociable then and a stranger always found welcome shelter at the settlers' cabins. Hospitality was every pioneer's pride. The people used to get together more often and, believe me, some great parties were held in the little log houses.

"Money didn't cut such a figure as it does today. A little money went a long ways and people had other ideals than chasing the dollar. Nobody had very much but people were contented. The folks didn't travel at so fast a pace."

Mr. Luck says that the Indian trails of the early days were better highways in many respects than the roads of today. Of course they were not made for wagon travel but although narrow he declares they were always in good condition.

When Mr. Luck came to Iowa the best land could be purchased for $1.25 per acre. Some of this land now cannot be touched for less than $500 and on up.

CARRIES FIRST MAIL TO WATERLOO

Interesting story from pen of octogenarian--Resident of Iowa for 79 years--Traveled Cedar Valley when it was a wilderness--Establishment of first postoffice in county--Various experiences of pioneer days.

I will endeavor to contribute a few lines of history of my pioneer days as near as I can recall them.

My father L. P. Luck, came to Iowa in 1832, locating at Dubuque, which was then an Indian village with a few log cabins. He was a wagon maker by trade and as there was no work in his line, he moved back to Bowling Green, Mo., where I was born in the year 1833. In the spring of 1834 our family moved to Bellevue, Jackson county, Iowa, and lived there a while, then moved back to Dubuque where father died in 1853. He was credited with making the first wagon built in Iowa.

BECOMES PONY MAIL CARRIER

In 1850 I strayed off down to Cedar Rapids and hired out to David King, Esq., to carry mail by horseback to Cedar Falls. There was no stage line and nothing but an Indian trail from Vinton to Cedar Falls. Vinton was called Fremont at that time and had no postoffice and Vinton was about four miles east of there. A man by the name of Keys was postmaster. They moved the postoffice up to Fremont and still called it Vinton. There was another postoffice in the state by the name of Fremont so they changed the name to Vinton. There wasn't a house on the town plat of Vinton but old man Hinkle lived down at the mouth of Hinkle Creek and he was postmaster. Two miles up the river from Vinton lived a settler by the name of Dan Harris; the next house on the trail was Charles Mullan's.

MEETING WITH FIRST SETTLERS.

The first man I met in Black Hawk county was George W. Hanna and the next man was Squire E. D. Adams who lived about two miles above Hanna's. The third man was Dempsey Overman of Sturgis Rapids, later Cedar Falls. There was only one log cabin in Cedar Falls and Mr. Overman couldn't keep me over night, so I returned to Squire Adam's and staid with him during the four years that I carried the mail. Overman was first postmaster at Cedar Falls and the office was established in January, 1850, according to a history of Black Hawk county published in 1878. I came up there the first part of July, 1850. Dr. Guthrie contracted to carry the mail from Quasqueton to Cedar Falls for four years and he got lost on his first trip and couldn't find the postoffice; he returned to Quasqueton and the next week he found his way to Cedar Falls. He told me this himself. It is possible that he let the route to Mr. Case. I do not know about this as I delivered the mail to Cedar Falls Tuesdays and the mail carrier from Quasqueton delivered his on Thursdays, so we never saw each other. I made the trip from Cedar Rapids to Cedar Falls weekly. It took four days if there was no blizzard or high water. Sometimes it took all the week to make the trip. Mr. King, the contractor to whom I hired out, got $300. a year, and the first year I carried the mail he gave me $8 a month. I got a little raise each year. Everything was cheap then. Men on a farm got from $8 to $12 a month. Land was $1.25 per acre anywhere.

A postoffice was established at Miller's Creek and named Elix and George Ellis was appointed postmaster. Another postoffice was established on Mullan's called Waterloo. Charles Mullan selected the name for it and was appointed postmaster, and delivered the mail to him at his log house.

PLATTING OF WATERLOO

When the committee of three who selected the location of the county seat of Black Hawk county looked over Mullan's ford, generally known as Prairie Rapids crossing and later Waterloo. It was the most central point in the county but they said it was no place for a town so they located it at Cedar Falls. John H. Brooks lived at Cedar Falls. He bought a town lot, built a house and sold liquor. When he sold his property, the lot owners declined to sell him another lot unless he would agree in the deed that he would not sell liquor on the premises conveyed. He refused to do this and informed them that he would go down the river a ways and start a town of his own. He came down to Mr. Chas. Mullan and they talked it over with George W. Hanna, Lewis Hallock, J. R. Pratt, James Virden and E. M. Cooley, platted the town of Waterloo. They gave everybody a lot that would build on it. In the year 1854 there was one store and one place that a man could stay all night. I think all the houses were log cabins at that time. In 1850, when I began carrying mail, there were twenty-six families in Black Hawk county and the total number of white inhabitants was 135. The first tavern that I can recall in Waterloo was owned by the Widow Cantonwine and her son, Sam. The first Doctor I remember was Dr. Buffon and Nelson Fancher was the first store keeper. I forded the Black Hawk creek as there were no bridges in those days.

A HUNTER'S PARADISE

There were plenty of deer, Elk and wolves in those days. I never saw any buffalo, they were further west. I saw elk only occasionally but I think I never made a trip without seeing deer and wolves. A mighty hunter by the name of King lived down the river near the Benton county line. Some men met him on Rock Creek one day and told him they had seen a bear on Big Creek. He started after it and returned later with some meat which he said was bear meat. Everybody wanted a taste of bear but those who sampled it declared it was tough and it later turned out that he had been unable to find the bear and palmed off wolf meat on them. Green head flies, Buffalo gnats and mosquitoes were so thick some days in the summer that I could hardly keep my horse on his feet, he wanted to roll all the time.

DESPERADOES TROUBLESOME.

There was not much news in those days. Most of the emigrants were on their way to California to hunt gold. In the fall of 1850 George Ellis took out claim down on Millers creek, and I used to stop there and get my dinner. The next summer the Way Brothers, desperadoes, whom the old pioneers will remember, stole Mr. Ellis's cattle. He followed them to Henry county and got his cattle back. The Way Brothers were back in Black Hawk county as soon as Mr. Ellis was. He wanted to shoot them but his brother-in-law, Hampton, wouldn't let him. When Chas. Mullan and his family were on the Cedar making sugar one spring the Way brothers went through their cabin and stole the quilts and blankets. There was a lot of stealing in those days and it was all laid to the Way Brothers and their gang.

EXPERIENCE WITH BUCKING PONY

I was well acquainted with John Melrose, Mrs. Hanna's brother, and often ate dinner at his cabin above the Black Hawk creek between the Mullan and Hanna cabins. I broke a bucking pony for him and it threw me off one day and my foot got caught in the stirrup. I was dragged through the brush for some distance and my clothes torn, but the saddle, mail and myself were left in a heap in the brush between the Melrose cabin and Cedar Falls. I followed the pony about a mile and caught him. I never saw John Melrose but once after he moved to Wright county where he was shot but not fatally wounded in a battle with horse thieves. Melrose was a member of a posse pursuing the thieves and with another man, by the name of Donaldson was cornered. Donaldson was shot through the lung and died from his wound. Melrose was shot through the neck but recovered.

HADN'T LOST A HORSE THIEF.

The road was lonesome and if any one wanted to go from Vinton to Cedar Falls they would wait until I came along and go with me. George Sanders of Benton county accompanied me on one of these occasions and after we crossed Miller's creek and came out of the timber, we noticed a man mounted on a grey horse about half a mile ahead of us. George suggested that we travel a little faster and catch up with him, so we did. We found him to be John Edwards a notorious horse thief. There was a reward of $50 for him. But he was ready for us and had a gun but he said he would be a d--n fool to give up his gun when everybody wanted to capture him. George asked him if he wanted to trade horses and he replied, 'I stole this horse and they would take it away from you and you never harmed me.' We asked him where he was going and he replied that he intended to leave the country. Just before we reached Mullan's he turned to the river and crossed at Mullan's ford where the city of Waterloo now is. We hadn't lost a horse thief and let him go and that was the last time he was ever seen in the country to my knowledge.

WOLVES DEVOUR HORSE.

Bands of Pottawattamie and Musquakie Indians roamed up and down the Cedar River. I often rode a distance with them. They would camp at Cedar Rapids, Vinton and at Newell's between Cedar Falls and Janesville.

In the winter of 1852 a Mr. Kline of Benton county went with me to Cedar Falls to trade a horse for lumber to build a flat boat to enable him to ship corn down the Cedar to St. Louis. His horse was so valuable that he was unable to make the desired trade, so he started back with me. When we got to Miller's creek, the stream was frozen over and his horse didn't want to go onto the ice. He urged the animal and when it finally jumped it strained its shoulder and got lame over mile. I staid with him until we crossed Rock Creek and it was getting dark. He told me I had better go on and he would try to get his horse to Dan Harris', sometime in the night. He got the animal within four miles of Vinton and left it in a grove and went on to Harris', where he stayed all night. When he returned in the morning, he found that the horse had been attacked by wolves and its hind quarters were so badly lacerated that he cut its throat with a jack knife, and went home with only the saddle and bridle.

CEDAR RAPIDS NEAREST MARKET

I was acquainted with Andrew Mullarkey, Oscar Virden and Jim Virden, who were among the first settlers, and George Philpot, who settled west of Cedar Falls in the fall of 1850. They all went to Cedar Rapids to mill and to do their trading, for there was not a store in Benton or Black Hawk county in 1850 to my recollection. I used to bring them tobacco and things that I could carry on horseback from Cedar Rapids. When Henry Mellan of Cedar Falls, afterwards justice of the peace, got married I brought his wedding suit from Cedar Rapids, tied on the back of my saddle.

On one of my trips in the winter time, a blizzard came up and when I reached Ellis' on Miller's creek, at noon, I couldn't see to go any further and I staid there until evening. It cleared up about sun down. A man named Strong and another man were there with two loads of slaughtered hogs on their way to Cedar Falls. When the moon rose we started. The wolves began to howl, attracted, I suppose, by the smell of the pork. We could see them following us. The men had two dogs, but they sneaked under the wagon and we couldn't get them out. When we got near to Mullan's cabin his dogs commenced barking and the wolves retreated. We reached Cedar Falls about midnight.

MARRIES AND SETTLES DOWN.

I quit carrying mail July 1, 1854, and worked at Cedar Rapids until fall. Then I came up to Butler county, got married, our wedding being the first in that county. Ten children were born to us. My wife still living and our portraits I am sending you to illustrate this article with, were taken quite a number of years ago. We had ten children, Thirty-eight grandchildren.

I remember Mrs. Hanna very well. I used to fetch her mail from Cedar Falls on my way back in the morning and she would always give me a little cake of Maple sugar.

The pioneers who experienced all the hardships incidental to the settlement of this country have mostly passed beyond and but very few profitted in a financial way.

Luck stayed in Dubuque until sixteen years of age when he went to Cedar Rapids and hired out to a man by the name of D. W. King to carry mail from Cedar Rapids to Cedar Falls once a week on horseback. At that time there were only two stores in Cedar Rapids, no houses in Vinton, and no houses between Vinton and Waterloo, a distance of thirty miles. Friday evening Rev. and Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Alma Ingalls and Mrs. Aug. Critzman came in to visit with Mr. Luck. They sang a few choice hymns, Charles Jennings and Willis Davis furnishing the music. Linda K. (Boltz) Luck, 60, of New Hartford, Iowa, passed away Friday, February 20, 2009, at Allen Memorial Hospital in Waterloo. She was born June 22, 1948 in Waterloo, Iowa, the daughter of Elmer and Sara (Marter) Boltz. Linda was a graduate of Waterloo West High School. On June 10, 1967 Linda was united in marriage with Clyde Luck Sr at the United Methodist Church in New Hartford. Linda married the love of her life. Clyde was in the air force so off to Germany they went where they welcomed a baby boy the following year.

Once back in Iowa they welcomed a baby girl. The couple made their home in rural New Hartford. Linda was apprehensive about the move, but soon adjusted and always told everyone this was our home and she was never going to move from here. Linda took great pride in their home and the outside flowers and decorations.

In 1986 Linda started a day care out of their home. For many years children came and went all touching a piece of her heart with loving memories. She was also a member of New Hartford United Methodist Church and Geyer-Bickner American Legion Post 0660 Auxiliary in New Hartford. In May 2002, when Clyde decided to retire Linda also retired from day care, so they could spend their time going to flea markets, garage sales, antiques, working on their flowers and yard work at home. Linda and Clyde were always together-they were inseparable as they enjoyed their days of retirement.

Linda and Clyde took a yearly vacation for garage sales in Missouri and Arkansas, where they always spotted an extra sale and Clyde had to make a three point turn on the highway to get back and see what treasures they could find. One of the sales was 160 miles long which they covered in three days. After 41 years of being together each trip was always an adventure of fun for them no matter where they went.

Linda was the heart of the family. She always put her family first. She was always there to listen, offer advice and give help to her children. She was such a loving and caring wife, mother and grandma. Linda's passing has left a deep hole in our hearts that will now need to be filled with memories, photos and stories.

Survivors include her husband, Clyde Luck, Sr., of New Hartford; a son, Clyde (Carla) Luck, Jr., of Waverly, Iowa; a daughter, Michele Luck (partner Lonnie Tillman), of New Hartford; two grandchildren, Chad and Conor Luck, of Waverly; her step-father, Arnold Ray, of Waterloo; a sister-in-law, Marlys (Andrew) Hogenkamp, of Shell Rock; a brother-in-law, Jerry Livingston, of Parkersburg, Iowa; special friends, Kathy (John) Lange of Waterloo, and Callie, Judy (Duane) Gifford of New Hartford; and several cousins, nieces and nephews, aunts and uncles, and friends.

Linda was preceded in death by her parents and a sister-in-law, Rae Ann Livingston.

Few Reprieves, No Special Meals for Dogs Sentenced to Walk Last Mile at Pound

Homeless dogs playfully corner Ernest Luck, Waterloo city dog catcher, as his son, Donald, looks on. These dogs are being held at the city dog pound with the hope that someone will give them a home. At right are some inmates of dogdom's death row.

By HERMAN La PLOUNT.
Courier Staff Writer

Seventeen dogs walked the last mile at the Waterloo dog pound last week.

These dogs were of every description, color and size. Curly black puppies . . . big burly hounds . . . playful water spaniels.

"It only took 10 minutes to dispose of them," said Mrs. Ernest Luck, wife of the dog catcher.

The procedure involved putting them in the 4x4 gas box, fastening the exhaust from the old Dodge truck and starting the motor.

The carcasses were taken to the rendering works.

These, of course, were the underprivileged dogs of Waterloo . . . the cur that ran loose without a home . . . the dog that disappeared and never returned . . . the pet that the owner neglected to buy a license for.

According to Dogcatcher Ernest Luck, any of these dogs could have been purchased for $1 plus the price of a license. "But nobody seemed to want them and we couldn't keep them indefinitely," he said.

"A few people do come out and buy dogs," Luck continued, "and so we try to keep the best ones for two or three weeks."

Luck appeared to be sympathetic, and the dogs jumped up on him as he spoke.

According to Luck, a dog is seldom picked up unless there is a complaint from someone. Most of them are stray dogs, some are sick or injured and some have bitten a person.

"If a dog bites a person, we keep him 10 days and return him to the owner," Luck said.

He feels that most dogs are not rogues. They bite because they are teased or mistreated ordinarily.

"We have one here now," he said, "and we have had no trouble with him at all."

It may be that there are no bad dogs . . . just delinquent owners.

Luck tells the story, however, of a friendly chow that was given the freedom of the kennels. One evening, the dog chewed its way through the side of the building and escaped. And when Luck tried to take him back, the dog turned on him and chased him on top of the truck.

He went on to say that eight or nine dogs are picked up each evening. They're housed in an old, barn-like structure that has been divided into 10 pens.

They're separated according to health, temperament and length of time they are going to be held.

The dogs are fed ground dog ration once each day . . . and are permitted no selection of menu on the evening that they trudge the last mile.

Several of the "better dogs" are being held now at the dog pound waiting for someone to buy them.

Some of these dogs will have a new home.

For the humane society (officially known as the Waterloo Humane Society) has a dog shelter under construction at the present time. Building material shortages have delayed its completion, but it should be ready soon.

But there is a side to this story that seldom gets told.

A DOG CATCHER'S LIFE IS A DOG'S LIFE.

Luck has been called out during all hours of the night . . . sometimes to shoot a dog . . . sometimes to chase a pig out of an irate woman's garden.

He has picked up everything from canaries to cows. He took a live fox out of a culvert near Polk and Colorado streets; he picked up a mule on Blowers street.

"I've shot pigeons because people complained they were ruining their roofs," he said. "And on one occasion I sprayed a roof with DDT and stuffed rags under the eaves . . . just to keep pigeons away."

But it's all in a day's work; that is, of course, a 24-hour day.

Shell Rock Township

By Mrs. Glen P. Thompson

The township, comprising 91 north, range 15 west, derives its name from Shell Rock River which rises in Albert Lea Lake, in Minnesota, and empties into the Cedar River approximately five miles above Cedar Falls. The fertile valley of this river, early made famous by trappers, hunters, and others who chanced to visit this delectable region, soon excited the curiosity of prospecting pioneers, who at first sight were charmed by the natural attractiveness of the country. Consequently the first settlements were made along the Shell Rock River.

The following are some of the early settlers of this township: Frederick Frowe; H. L. Sweitzer; Asa Stannard; J. D. Landphere; Amos Ressler; John Drum; Martin Gleason; G. C. Hawley; O. J. Wheeler; Sylvester Rice; Joseph Walker; James Whitehead; J. W. Allen; Henry Nettleton;

New Hartford has a very good fire department with a modern fire truck, but has no lawyers, dentists and has had no doctor since the spring of 1948.

The early settlements in the township were largely made up of men and women whose wealth consisted chiefly of youth, health, industrious habits and a determination to better their condition in life. They came from many states and foreign lands and had little or nothing in common except the common experience of having to struggle to accumulate anything of a surplus over bare subsistence and the earnest desire to leave to their children something other than an inheritance of the habit of industry. They saw in these unsettled prairies the possibilities of a great future, and spent the best years of their lives in the building of a new civilization.

The young people of today can know little and ap-

GREENBURY B. LUCK

First postal mail rider in this section. He carried mail in saddle bags from Cedar Rapids to the settlement at Cedar Falls. When he started, the only settlement between the two was Buck's crossing in Benton county, later Vinton. When Waterloo postoffice was established in 1851, he began delivering mail to Charles Mullan, first postmaster.

Luck was born in Bowling Green, Mo., in November, 1833, and was brought to Bellevue, Ia., by his parents when he was 6 months old. He died at his home in New Hartford, Feb. 8, 1925.

Friday, November 9, 1923, Greenburry Luck of New Hartford celebrated his 90th birthday. His grandchildren and great grandchildren came to his home with well filled baskets to help him celebrate the event.

Mr. Luck was born in Bolling Green, Missouri, Nov. 9, 1833. In the spring of 1834, when but six months of age his parents came to Bellview, Jackson Co., Iowa, since which time Mr. Luck has been a continuous resident of the state. Later his father moved to Dubuque and started a wagon shop and made the first wagon ever made in the state of Iowa, and sold it to a Mr. Jordan. G. B. Luck stayed in Dubuque until sixteen years of age when he went to Cedar Rapids and hired out to a man by the name of D. W. King to carry mail from Cedar Rapids to Cedar Falls once a week on horseback. At that time there were only two stores in Cedar Rapids, no houses in Vinton, and no houses between Vinton and Waterloo, a distance of thirty miles. There was no Waterloo at that time but later Mr. Mullan started a postoffice and called the place Waterloo. Mr. Luck carried mail for four years and then came to Butler county.

Married in 1854

On November 1, 1854 he was married to Miss Susan Williams. They were the first couple to be married in Butler county. He then entered land at Jimmerson's Grove, later selling his property to Harlan Bros. and moved to Cedar Falls where the family resided for two years when they again moved to a farm in Butler county. He continued to live on the farm until March, 1901, when he moved to Sinclair and engaged in the mercantile business. In December, 1902, his store, dwelling house and furniture all burned. He then moved to New Hartford, Iowa, where he has since made his home. His wife passed away on March 30, 1920. Mr. Luck has always been hale and hearty until about a year ago his health began to fail him, but yet he is very spry for a man of his years. He is the father of ten children, three of whom have passed to the great beyond. There are seven children living, forty-two grandchildren and forty-two great grandchildren.

Friday evening Rev. and Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Alma Ingalls and Mrs. Aug. Critzman came in to visit with Mr. Luck. They sang a few choice hymns, Charles Jennings and Willis Davis furnishing the music. Mr. Luck enjoyed this very much. After wishing him many happy returns of the day they departed for their several homes.

Susan Luck, nee Williams, was born in Allen county, Indiana, March 3, 1838. Died in New Hartford, Ia., March 30, 1920, aged 82 years, 27 days. In 1845 she moved with her father to Ohio. In 1851 they moved to Rock Island, Ill., and in 1852 to Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

In 1854 she was married to Greenbury Luck. Judge Palmer issued the marriage license, the first one issued in Butler county. They were married in the home of Mr. Clark of Clarksville by Rev. Holbrook.

To this union were born ten children: George Luck, Catherine, who parted this life at the age of 13 years, Mrs. Eliza Bowen, John, Mrs. Alice Ackerson, Ernest, Carrie, who died in 1913, Mrs. Lillie Bolton, Mrs. Erma Grandon and Mrs. Grace Brennan all of New Hartford except Mrs. Alice Ackerson of Parkersburg.

In 1854 the family moved to Jimmerson's grove, now Dumont, Iowa. From that place to Cedar Falls in 1857. They settled in Beaver Grove 1860 where they lived and raised their family. In 1901 failing health called from their life long labor on the farm and they moved to Sinclair, where they resided for two years. In 1903 they came to New Hartford where they have since resided.

In 1858 she united with the Methodist church at Cedar Falls and afterwards with the Baptist church at New Hartford. She has always been a faithful and devoted wife and mother. Loved and respected by those who knew her best. She leaves to mourn her departure her husband, three sons and five daughters, two sisters and four brothers: Albert Williams of Hurtle, Wisconsin, Charley Williams of Colfax, Iowa, Sarah Knight of Des Moines, Jack Williams of New Hartford, Laura Atkinson of Marshalltown, Homer Williams of Kansas City, Mo.; forty-two grandchildren, twenty-seven great grandchildren.

During her sickness and death and with her to the end.

We have lost our wife and mother.

She has bid us all adieu.

She has gone to live in Heaven

And her face is lost to view.

Oh that darling, how we loved her,

Oh how hard to give her up.

But an angel came down for her

And removed her from our flock.

Card of Thanks—We wish to express our sincere thanks to our friends for the many kindnesses shown us during the sickness and after the death of our beloved wife and mother. We also wish to thank Mr. Eberhard for closing his place of business during her sickness, death and burial; also Knipe & Frederickson for the lovely flowers they sent and the choir for their appropriate songs.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHN LUCK.

Sophie Marie Lebahn was born in Mecklenburg, Germany, on May 1, 1867, and died at her home in New Hartford, Iowa, on December 21, 1927.

When fourteen years of age she came with her parents from Germany to the United States, locating at Winslow, Iowa. She lived there about three years when the family moved near to New Hartford where she continued to live until her death.

On June 21, she was married to John Luck of New Hartford. Eight children were born into their home, Mrs. Eva Garner of New Hartford; Greenbury of Plainfield, Iowa; Ernie and George who were twins, George having died at the age of 2 months; Fred and Orion, Mrs. John DeBuhr and Raymond all living at New Hartford.

Besides the husband and children there remain to mourn her loss two sons-in-law, four daughters-in-law, twenty grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. Mary Munger of Sandstone, Minn., one brother, Fred Lebahn of Parkersburg, Iowa, and a host of friends and acquaintances.

At the age of fourteen she was confirmed in the Lutheran church and remained firm in that faith through her whole life. She was patient in suffering and thru all her sickness of about fourteen years she constantly sought comfort and strength thru prayer in order that she might endure and continue her service for the family. Her last words were expressed for the welfare of her husband and family. She was a devout wife, wonderful mother, good neighbor and loved and respected by all who knew her. Willing to live in the flesh for the sake of those dear to her, having a desire to depart and be with Christ; which is far better.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Unger at 1:30 o'clock at the house and 2:00 o'clock from the Methodist church Friday afternoon. She was laid to rest in Beaver Grove cemetery.

The pallbearers were six nephews, as follows: Garth Munger, Howard Ackerson, Robert Ackerson, Leon Grandon, Luck Bolton, Clarence Brennan.

Through all the golden days that were,

The dearest pal of all was she,
And in the days that are to be,
My heart will glow with love of her,

Whose loving care still mothers me.

WRONG KIND OF SPENDING.

New Hartford, Ia. — To the Editor: Abraham Lincoln said that a wise man doesn't need to be told, only reminded.

We need to be reminded what our Constitution has become.

We, the people of the United States of America, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, and secure domestic tranquility for ourselves and our posterity do for every $2.50 spent on intoxicating beverages for ourselves spend $1 for total education of our posterity and for every $2 spent on tobacco for ourselves spend $1 for wages to teachers of our posterity, and we, the American people, went to the races last year and bet over $1,500,000 and then bet our posterity is going to the dogs.

■ Honor the flag

ALLISON — On Feb. 24, 1989, I wrote a letter to Sen. Charles Grassley, Sen. Tom Harkin and Congressman David Nagle concerning flag burning and misuse of the flag.

I am writing this to all those who hold an office or position in our government, who we, the people, put in office.

What is the purpose of the flag of The United States of America, and what does it stand for? Who owns the flag? Who gives anyone the right to disgrace the flag?

The American flag stands for freedom under God. We the people own the flag.

The flag is to be flown above and to the right over all other flags over the land of the free, the United States of America. The flag is flown over all properties of the United States no matter what country, land or sea, to identify that our country owns this property, and we the people own the government, just like the people own the flag.

American men and women have given their lives for what the United States flag stands for. It stands for freedom for all people who live under the flag.

The law has always been in effect. All they have to do is enforce it.

I, for one, fought for our country, and for upholding the freedom, helping to keep this country of ours free.

What about all of you people who live under our flag. I plead with all to honor our flag by displaying it and using it in its proper places. Not to be stuck here and there as any old thing.

Let's honor the flag with respect, in that we are free.

Letters to the Editor

■ Protect the flag

CEDAR FALLS — Once again I appeal to the American people to understand the meaning of the flag of the United States of America.

First of all, the flag identifies a nation. How else can one identify? This is how we identify our government and the place, objects, things and property of the United States of America. No matter where it's located in the world, we the people own the government and all the government possesses. So the flag belongs to the American people. It's a common law of the land.

Every person in the United States of America has an identification, or should have. Everything a person owns has an identification, including our children. Also places, objects and even personal things.

Now, if someone tries to take that identification, or damage it, or destroys the identification, this is breaking the law. Would you or I or anyone else fight to keep someone from doing so? I would — I would fight until I died. I believe most people would.

Men and women and even children have died for the American flag and our country. So here is a common law that was established way back in the early century.

Anyone would not even think about going to another country and destroying that country's flag.

For instance, I'll use Turkey for an example. That person or persons would be taught a lesson very quickly, with a very short life.

Please stay united and stay involved by protecting our flag — our country under God.

■ Honor the flag

ALLISON — On Feb. 24, 1989, I wrote a letter to Sen. Charles Grassley, Tom Harkin and Congressman David Nagle concerning flag burning and misuse of the flag.

I am writing this to all those who hold an office or position in our government, who we, the people, put in office.

What is the purpose of the flag of The United States of America, and what does it stand for? Who owns the flag? Who gives anyone the right to disgrace the flag?

The American flag stands for freedom under God. We the people own the flag.

The flag is to be flown above and to the right over all other flags over the land of the free, the United States of America. The flag is flown over all properties of the United States no matter what country, land or sea, to identify that our country owns this property, and we the people own the government, just like the people own the flag.

American men and women have given their lives for what the United States flag stands for. It stands for freedom for all people who live under the flag.

The law has always been in effect. All we have to do is enforce it.

I, for one, fought for our country, and for upholding the freedom, helping to keep this country of ours free.

What about all of you people who live under our flag. I plead with all to honor our flag by displaying it and using it in its proper places. Not to be stuck here and there as any old thing.

Let's honor the flag with respect, in that we are free.

Letters to the Editor

■ Protect the flag

CEDAR FALLS — Once again I appeal to the American people to understand the meaning of the flag of the United States of America.

First of all, the flag identifies a nation. How else can one identify? This is how we identify our government and the place, objects, things and property of the United States of America. No matter where it's located in the world, we the people own the government and all the government possesses. So the flag belongs to the American people. It's a common law of the land.

Every person in the United States of America has an identification, or should have. Everything a person owns has an identification, including our children. Also places, objects and even personal things.

Now, if someone tries to take that identification, or damage it, or destroys the identification, this is breaking the law. Would you or I or anyone else fight to keep someone from doing so? I would — I would fight until I died. I believe most people would.

Men and women and even children have died for the American flag and our country. So here is a common law that was established way back in the early century.

■ New Hartford pride

NEW HARTFORD — Thank you New Hartford volunteers. The month of June this year was very treacherous in terms of bad weather. Our city and rural area were hit hard with high winds, heavy rain and hail. It was bad enough when buildings were blown down and trees uprooted, but to be faced next with the possibility of a flood just seemed too much for our community to have to bear.

But, good things sometimes appear in the face of adversity. The most predominant of the good things would have to be the volunteers. From the beginning, on June 20, when the devastating thunderstorm was headed toward our community, our volunteer firemen were out spotting and watching the storm and setting off the civil defense sirens in ample time for everyone to find shelter.

And, after the storm on June 21, when so many volunteers came to help clean up the debris from fallen trees.

It was absolutely amazing to see chain saws cutting and the wood being hauled away. It gave me a great feeling of pride to see so many people helping.

Then two days later the volunteers were there to help fill sand bags and haul dirt and to do anything that needed immediate action for the impending possibility of a flood.

It would take a full page ad in the paper to list the names of all who volunteered, so I just want to say thank you, and I'm proud, very proud, of everyone.

STOREKEEPER IS FREED OF BLAME IN BANDIT DEATH

Mar. 18, 1931
Jury Declares Messerly Shot

Bolton in Defense of Life, Property.

Ed B. Messerly, Finchford storekeeper, was absolved of blame in the shooting of Luck Bolton, "joke" bandit, in a verdict returned Wednesday noon by a coroner's jury following an inquest in the municipal courtroom.

The verdict was "that the said Luck Bolton met his death in a store at Finchford, Ia., by being shot by Ed B. Messerly, in defense of the life and property of the said Messerly."

The jury, composed of C. S. Bowen, Hudson; Frank Allen, Walnut Court apartments, and T. M. Bowen, Hudson, gave its verdict only a few minutes after the close of testimony. Six witnesses were put on the stand by Coroner E. C. McMillan.

The handful of spectators was given a laugh when Robert Messerly, 12, son of the storekeeper, told on the witness stand of having run from the Messerly store while Bolton was attempting the holdup on the night of Feb. 21 and of returning from the Messerly house with two shotguns, one a 12 gauge and the other a .410 shortly after his father had shot the bandit.

Operation Described.

Bolton died in a Waterloo hospital Monday following an operation which was performed as a final effort to relieve pressure on the bandit's spinal cord.

Dr. J. G. McAlvin, one of the surgeons who attended Bolton, said the operation was performed with little possibility of success but that it was the only chance Bolton had for recovery. It was performed Monday. The doctor said Bolton's spinal cord was not severed but it was somewhat congested below the eighth vertebra where the bullet was lodged. Damage to his nervous system which rendered the lower half of his body paralyzed was caused by the concussion of the steel jacketed rifle bullet, Dr. McAlvin explained.

Sheriff Wagner testified that Bolton had declared at the hospital that he held himself fully to blame for his plight.

Fifty at Funeral.

Funeral services for Luck Clarence Bolton, 32, were conducted Wednesday afternoon at O'Keefe & Towne chapel. Rev. W. A. Buell, pastor of the Associated Churches of New Hartford, officiated. A crowd numbering 50 persons attended the services. The body was taken to New Hartford for burial.

1982

Randall L. Bolton, 75 of New Hartford, died early Saturday afternoon, March 13, at Allen Memorial Hospital in Waterloo where he had been a patient for the past five days.

Cedar Falls Man Hurt By Dynamite Explosion

Otto Lueders Suffers Broken Thigh In Blast

Otto Lueders, 515 West Fifth street, lay in Sartori hospital Thursday suffering from a shattered hip bone, exposure and extreme shock following an accident Wednesday afternoon when a blast of dynamite he was setting off on a farm about six miles west of the city blew a fragment of rock against him.

Lueders was blasting "nigger-heads" on the Andrew Jacobsen farm six miles west of the college on West Twenty-Seventh street. The rocks were to be used in the filter at the new Waterloo sewage disposal plant.

Unheard

About 2:45 p. m., he set off a blast of dynamite and was standing only about 20 rods from the blast, it is believed, when a fragment of rock crashed into his left thigh, breaking the bone and knocking him unconscious. He was alone at the time and when he regained consciousness his cries for help were unheard.

He lay in the field for at least an hour and during that interval, during which he was unconscious, he was attacked by hogs which were loose in the field. In the intervals when he was conscious, he beat off the hogs and continued his cries for help.

Secure Aid

About 4 p. m., Miller Westergaard, living in the vicinity, happened to be passing on foot and heard his cries for help. Westergaard hailed a passing motorist, H. L. Church, who works on the W. P. Rickert farm, and the two finally secured a physician and called an ambulance from Cedar Falls.

At the time of the dynamite blast which injured Lueders was determined from the testimony of children at the school which is about one-half mile distant. They said that the blast occurred about 2:45 p. m.

Lueders was brought to Sartori hospital and physicians said Thursday that they hoped to be able to save the left leg which was badly injured. His condition however, is still regarded as serious.

Lueders is about 55 years of age.

Cedar Falls Man Dies of Hurts in Dynamite Blast

(Courier Special Service)

Cedar Falls—An effort to save the lives of several hogs who had escaped from a brooder house on the Andrew Jacobsen farm caused the death of Otto Lueders, 62, who was fatally injured in a dynamite blast Wednesday afternoon. Lueders died at Sartori hospital at 10:35 p. m. Friday.

Otto Lueders

Lueders had been blasting rocks at the quarry on Twenty-seventh street west, about five miles from this city, for use at the Waterloo sewage disposal plant, when he noticed the hogs roaming wild too close to the spot where he was working. He attempted to drive them from danger and was about 20 rods from the dynamite plant at the time of the explosion.

Left Leg Fractured.

He suffered a severe fracture of the left leg near the hip and numerous bruises. After lying for two hours Lueders was discovered by Miller Westergaard, farmer in that neighborhood.

Dream broken
CEDAR FALLS — Why does this have to happen?

When our daughter was small the doctors told us she would never be able to ride a bike because she is legally blind. She never let that stop her. It took a lot of practice and determination, but she finally conquered her battle.

We borrowed a bike to see how she would do. Then she wanted a bigger bike like all the other kids. We bought a used three-speed which she thought was great.

She wanted to enter a bicycle race. We let her and that was the biggest day of her life. Our hearts were pounding when we heard the gun go off and to see her doing something we never thought we'd see.

June 1988 we took her to a sporting goods store to let her pick out a new bicycle. She did. It was purple, her favorite color.

Friday, Oct. 14, someone thought they needed it worse than Sarah did. They stole it right out of our garage.

It has broken our hearts and hers to think people would do this to a little girl who has struggled for 12 years to get to this point and then have her dream shattered.

The person that stole it has not gone through what we have. To work with her for hours on end and see her struggle her little heart out so she could ride a bike.

I'll tell you my kids are not perfect, but they respect others' property and would never take anything that does not belong to them.

Please, if this person has a conscience or parents if you notice your child has a 24-inch blue/purple Schwinn Sprint girls bike around, would you please contact the police or us?

Legally blind girl gets replacement

CEDAR FALLS — Somebody broke Sarah Luders' heart this month when her bicycle was stolen.

But it was mended this week by an outpouring of compassion by area residents, who responded to her mother's letter to the Courier about how much the bike meant to the 12-year-old legally blind girl.

On Wednesday night, Sarah, daughter of Ron and Pam Luders of 2215 Grand Blvd., received a new, bright pink bicycle to replace the one taken from the family garage Oct. 14.

The bike came from Jesse and Lorraine Colvin also of Cedar Falls, who attend the same church as the Luders.

PAM LUDERS said Sarah was very happy after receiving the bike. "She said, 'Mom, I just love it. Mom, I think I love (the Colvins) too.'"

The Colvins made only the first of several responses the family received from people volunteering to do what they could to replace Sarah's loss.

Sarah has learned that there are nice people in this world.

"I'm just speechless," giggles Sarah, a student at Hansen Elementary where she is in a learning disability class.

Sarah has been considered legally blind since birth. She has limited visibility and doctors told the family she would never be able to ride a bike.

But nobody told Sarah she couldn't. She loves to ride her bicycle and even entered the Peoples Bank bicycle races.

In June, the Luders bought Sarah a bicycle — a 10-speed Schwinn with specially equipped handlebars so she would not have to lean over to apply the brakes.

On the night of Oct. 14, Pam Luders recalls looking out her kitchen window about 9 p.m. and seeing a strange bicycle in the patio area between the house and garage. She went to investigate and found Sarah's bicycle was gone, with two other family bicycles left alone, and the strange bicycle left in its place.

Police determined the other bicycle had also been stolen and it was returned to its owner. But Sarah's bicycle is still missing.

Pam decided to write a letter to the Courier, hoping that someone who had seen the bicycle would come forward with information.

THE LUDERS still have not heard a word on their bike, but they heard plenty from others wanting to help.

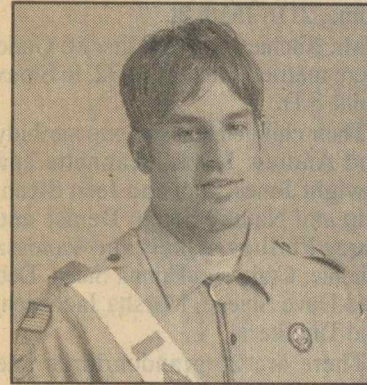

Pam said the first call the family received was from the Colvins. Lorraine Colvin said they wanted to help Sarah because "she's very special to us. She's a very sweet little girl and we like her."

The family then received a call from a Department of Corrections officer who offered to buy her a new bike. A neighbor lady offered to give up her own three-speed bike for the girl.

"This is not the reason why I put the letter in. I was just flabbergasted when the calls started," Pam said. "It just shows there are good people still in this world, so many people willing to give."

But the family has not yet given up hope of finding Sarah's purple 10-speed. If it turns up, the new bike will be saved for Sarah's younger brothers, Matt, 9, or Jason, 5.

Iowa National Guard tackles security issues

By MATTHEW WILDE

Courier Staff Writer

WATERLOO

The days of the weekend warrior are over.

Maj. Gen. Ron Dardis of the Iowa National Guard visited Waterloo Municipal Airport Wednesday in conjunction with a tour of local military installations, saying the Guard's new role of keeping Iowa's airports safe is just one way the state's citizen soldiers will help combat terrorism.

About 60 National Guard soldiers are on duty at eight of Iowa's commercial airports, supplementing security forces already in place. Four armed soldiers are assigned to Waterloo, standing guard while passengers pass through metal detectors and are searched before boarding planes.

Though air travel remains "significantly" down in Waterloo, like many parts of the country, Dardis and local officials hope the military presence will send a clear message that it's safe to fly.

"What I'm hearing is that soldiers are very well received. Passengers are coming up and saying, 'Thanks for serving,' and 'Glad you're here,'" Dardis said. "Our No. 1 goal is home land defense."

Gov. Tom Vilsack activated Iowa National Guard troops for airport security Oct. 3 after President Bush urged the nation's governors to do so. Originally, soldiers were only going to serve in this capacity for four to six months, but Dardis said six months will be the minimum. The president is looking into creating a government agency to provide airport security, taking away that responsibility from the airlines.

With today's scaled down, high-tech military involved in numerous security, peace keeping, humanitarian and combat operations throughout the world, Dardis said active duty personnel no longer can carry the full load.

"The weekend warrior concept is gone. The National Guard and Reserves are involved in more than 50 percent of the country's military missions," he said. "The Iowa Guard is held in very high esteem in the country due to the quality of our units. ... We are very combat ready."

Dardis also visited the 1st Battalion, 133rd Infantry unit on Airport Road and the 113th Cavalry Squadron, an aviation maintenance unit, on West Big Rock Road.

Airport manager Kim Bakker expects business will pick up during the holidays. Because Waterloo has a small airport, passing through security checks doesn't take as long, she said, which could be beneficial.

"An airport Waterloo's size can provide (security) screening a lot faster than larger ones. It's more convenient," she said. "The passengers have been patient so far with no complaints."

Fewer passengers and heightened security means less revenue. Bakker and Waterloo Mayor John Roof said the facility will look at obtaining government grants to offset security costs and lost revenue.

Rooff said Dardis' visit is a sign federal, state and local governments will work together to safeguard its citizens. The Waterloo and Cedar Falls police departments along with the Black Hawk County Sheriff's Office are also providing added security at the airport.

"Right now we're fighting to maintain (the airport)," Rooff said. "Without it, economic development for the entire Cedar Valley will be hurt. We can't allow that to happen. If we let fear control us, they (terrorists) win."
