

Receive Newspaper Plaques

Divisional winners in the 1961 Soil Conservation Achievement contest received their plaques last Wednesday evening during the annual Soil Conservation District banquet and meeting. The winners are (from left) Chester Adams; Teddy Dixon and his father Dale, who shared a plaque; and Rex Blackwell. The awards are given each year by the Bloomfield Newspapers. The Adams won also in regional competition in the judging completed last summer. Davis county winners have consistently been represented among regional winners, but no state awards have been won locally.

Outstanding Conservationists

Harold Baughman (left), a commissioner with the local Soil Conservation District, last Wednesday evening presented citations for outstanding achievement in conservation to the Roulet Brothers (Sam and Harvey), represented here by Harvey (center), and to Wayne Bain. Also cited for his conservation work in the past year was Donald Altheide, who was unable to attend the banquet and receive the award.
