

Kelsey Named To State SCS Board

Dean Kelsey, Hardin township farmer, was this week elected a state director of the Iowa Association of Soil Conservation Districts at a state meeting held in Davenport. Kelsey, who farms a 240-acre farm southeast of Iowa Falls, is a county soil conservation commissioner. The Kelsey farm has been operated under an SCS plan since 1946, it being the third farm in the county to have a complete soil conservation plan drawn. Kelsey will represent 11 central Iowa counties on the state board.

Leland Reece and Harold Marsh, both of New Providence, are the other county commissioners.