

Wis-142 - Robert French farm, Onalaska, Wis. 4/29/37. A woodland planting site where a pasture is past using. Contour furrows are 6 ft. apart here. Two rows of Caragana are planted around the area along the fences. This is followed by 6 rows of green ash, etc. The northeast corner is planted into white pine with a few Colorado blue spruce and dogwood bushes in the very corner of the area. Trees are set 6 feet apart in the furrows. Contour furrows are preferable to scalping as a preparation for plantings for two reasons: first, the method is much less expensive and second, the furrows conserve moisture.
