

Here's Another FB Builder

Like many other farmers, Dean Kelsey, 35, Iowa Falls (Hardin county) would like to see "a workable plan to cut production and expand markets."

Presently on the Hardin county membership committee, Dean finds the legislative phase of Farm Bureau work most appealing. He believes FB is the "spokesman for farmers to protect agricultural interests in the legislative field."

He believes Farm Bureau and its affiliated companies are important in keeping farm costs in line. Dean is also an SCS commissioner, being chairman of that body. Mrs. Kelsey is an assistant 4-H girls' leader.

Dean is "in the process of buying" the 240-acre farm he has lived on since birth. Starting with 4-H and FFA projects, he worked into a stock and machinery partnership with his father, buying his father's share Jan. 1, 1958. Dean's is a general farming operation, including hogs, feeder cattle, sheep and grain.

Handy with tools, Dean likes to remodel machinery to fit his farming operation. He has remodeled, too, a school bus for his family — a boy and three girls — to sleep and eat in during vacations.

Dean also participates in an activity not usually associated with farming: motorcycle hill climbing.
