Conservation awards to Clausen, Hammer

CEDAR FALLS — A University of Northern Iowa professor and student were honored at the Soil and Water Conservation Society annual meeting in Columbus, Ohio.

Bernard L. Clausen, UNI associate professor of biology, was one of 23 society members presented with a Commendation Award for 1988. The award is given to SWCS members for professional achievement and service to the society at the state or regional level.

Elaine Kay Hammer of Evansdale was one of four recipients of a $1,200 Donald A. Williams Soil Conservation Scholarship. She is a junior at Northern Iowa majoring in environmental planning.

Hammer is currently a soil conservation technician for the Black Hawk County Soil Conservation Service in Waterloo and is a member of the Iowa Chapter of SWCS.
