This directory is designed to assist you in providing additional information when only a telephone number is available. Telephone numbers are arranged in numerical sequence from the lowest number to the highest number. With this system, it takes the "guess work" out of who called, blind numbers in advertising or any other situation where only the phone number is given.

Farm and Home Publishers Ltd. is pleased to introduce our "new look" plat and directory book. In our never ending effort to produce the best and most accurate plat and directory books, Farm & Home Publishers has invested countless hours of research and development in the areas of G.I.S. and digital cartography. The result of these efforts is the book you are now reading. By using computerized drafting, digital imagery and our own extensive informational updating procedure, we are able to combine data from several sources, including: County or Township Assessor's office, State Dept. of Transportation or Dept. of Highways, E 911 systems and our own census takers. The data is maintained on a computer system in database and line drawing/drafting formats. Since the data is computerized by category or level, we can update and/or manipulate the data on a single level, such as primary paved roads, then combine it with other levels, such as hydrology or land ownership. When we combine certain levels, we are able to produce the easy to read township plat maps you see in this book. If we combine other levels, we produce the county map page or the township directory pages. The geographic information in this book has been calibrated to fit the USGS quadrangle system so it is consistent with many other G.I.S. systems in use today. With digital data, we are able to rescale maps to virtually any size, including 36 or 50 inch wall maps. We are also able to change linestyles or line "dominance" very easily to better show or enhance particular information. We hope you take a few minutes to observe some of these attributes in your plat & directory booklet, we feel that you will find every page easy to read and professionally printed.

LAND SURVEYS AND DESCRIPTIONS

Land is owned as private property in the United States and is transferred in various ways from one owner to another. To make possible private ownership and property transfer, it is essential to have a system through which a purchaser can obtain a clear title to any tract of land.

A clear title means that there are no legal claims against the ownership of the property. In order to transfer real estate, its location must be positively and specifically described. If this is not done, endless arguments and lawsuits may occur.

A land description gives the definite location of a specific tract of land. Such a description can fit no other tract. From it you can locate that specific area. The legal description of property is given on many documents and papers, such as abstracts, deeds, and tax statements. Descriptions of real estate also have many other uses.

A land title, or title to a tract of land, is evidence of ownership. Title to real estate is dependent on a legal description of the property which in turn must be based on an official survey

Two systems of describing farmland are used in the United States. One is known as the system of metes and bounds and the other as the system of rectangular surveys.

Metes and Bounds

The metes and bounds system of describing land is widely used in many parts of the world.

Starting Point. A description according to the metes and bounds system must have a starting place or point of reference. The description continues for specified distances along lines called courses until the tract has been circumscribed and the starting point again reached. The quarter-section corners of the Government Survey may be the starting point of metes and bounds descriptions. These points may be determined by reference to the original or restored corner markers. However, topographic features may also serve as a starting point. Trees, stones, rivers, or lakes so used are called natural monuments. Natural monuments and artificial monuments, such as government markers, fences, or highways, have the disadvantage that they may be moved or destroyed.

Courses and Distances. Courses are identified by direction, with distances being linear measurements along these lines. Sometimes, a course has been partly described as connecting two natural monuments, such as trees, but generally it is described in terms of its angle to a point of reference. The usual point of reference is a meridian or true north and south line. The course is given in terms of the angle it makes with the meridian and may be referred to as the bearing of the line. A course in a northeast direction would be described as North 45 degrees East, indicating that the course is 45 degrees east of a true north-south line (Fig. 1). If a course is determined by means of a compass, magnetic variation must be considered.

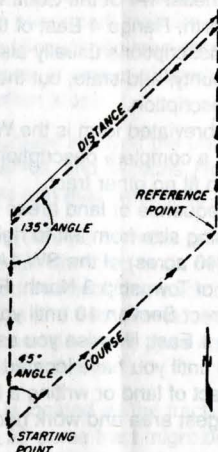

Fig. 1. Sketch of a tract described by the metes and bounds system.

Miles, feet and rods are commonly used to describe distances along a line, but chains are also frequently used. A legal chain, composed of 100 links of 7.92 inches, is 66 feet long. Actual chains of 50 links, called two-pole chains, were half as long as a legal chain and frequently used in surveying land.

Irregular boundaries. Some tracts of land, such as those bordering lakes or rivers, have irregular boundaries. A tract described as lying along a river is typically interpreted as having one boundary at the middle line between the shores of the stream. Lake boundaries are somewhat different. The owners of land adjoining a natural lake own to the center, if the lake is not navigable; otherwise the title to the bed of the lake is in trust for the people. The ownership of artificial lake beds depends upon the words of conveyance used in transferring the shoreline property.

Streets and highways sometimes serve as boundaries. Descriptions of land abutting public highways in Illinois normally would be interpreted to include a portion of the right of way. However, exceptions occur when the public has complete title or when a city street is involved.

Rectangular Land Surveys

In 1785 the Continental Congress of the United States passed an ordinance directing that a rectangular system be used in surveying public lands. Thomas Jefferson was directed to organize it. The United States was the first country to use such a system, but Canada later adopted it.

The rectangular survey system was set up to accomplish two things: (1) provide for definite location of the land by establishing corner markers on the ground, and (2) provide a short, complete, direct, and easily understood legal description. The system involves the use of principal meridians, base lines, townships, and sections.

Principal Meridians and Base Lines form the skeleton of the rectangular survey system. The intersection of the base line and the principal meridian is the starting point of the survey for a given area. The meridians are north and south lines. The base lines are east and west lines.

Having established the principal meridian and the base line for an area to be surveyed, the surveyor then runs the exterior lines of the township. The LOCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP is determined by the principal meridian and base line. Its location is expressed in terms of ranges east or west of the principal meridian and in terms of tiers of townships north or south of the base line. A regular township--that is, a survey township and not a governmental subdivision--is six miles square.

In Fig. 2 the township marked with an X is in the third tier of townships north of the base line and in the fourth range east of the principal meridian. If we assume that the Third Principal Meridian is the one shown, this township would be described as Township 3 North and Range 4 East of the Third Principal Meridian. This description can be abbreviated to T-3-N, R-4-E of the 3rd P.M.

A Section Is Located Within A Township. The township can be located by the method described above. However, a regular township is a six-mile square; thus it contains thirty-six square miles. Each square mile is one section. A good survey system should make it possible to locate and describe any part of any one of these thirty-six sections. To accomplish this purpose, a definite system of surveying and numbering sections is followed. In all surveys since 1796, the sections in each township have been numbered from 1 to 36, beginning at the upper right, or northeast, corner of the township (Fig. 3).

6	5	4	3	2	1
7	8	9	10	11	12
18	17	16	15	14	13
19	20	21	22	23	24
30	29	28	27	26	25
31	32	33	34	35	36

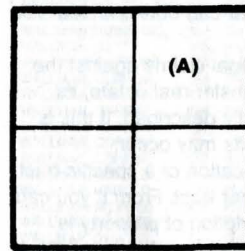

Fig. 3. A regular township contains 36 sections numbered as shown above.

It is now possible to locate both the township and the section containing a tract of land. Adding this information to the location of the township described previously, we have Section 10, Township 3 North, Range 4 East of the Third Principal Meridian, which can be abbreviated to Sec. 10, T-3-N, R-4-E of the 3rd P.M.

A Tract Of Land Is Located Within A Section. If the tract in question is smaller than a section (approximately 640 acres) or is located in more than one section, the fraction or fractions of the sections must be indicated. This is done by identifying and locating the fractional portion of each section for each tract of land.

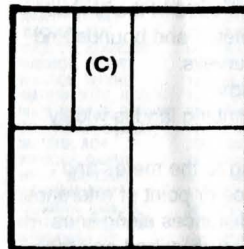

The location, size, and description of each of four tracts of land within a section are shown in Fig. 4.

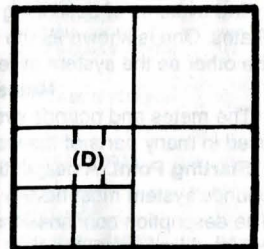

(A) N.E. 1/4

(D) W. 1/2 of N.E. 1/4 of S.W. 1/4

Fig. 4. Descriptions of four sections of land within a section.

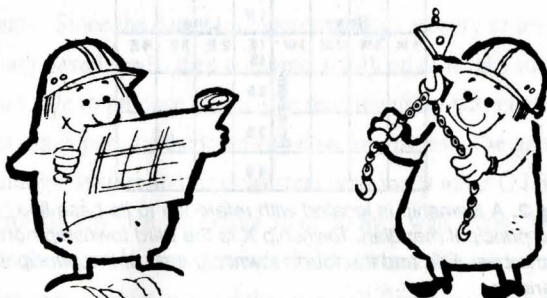

In land descriptions the last fraction (to the right) is the largest area or portion of the section. We read from left to right. However, in writing a description from a map or in locating a tract of land on a map, we proceed from right to left. Thus, we first locate or describe the largest fraction of the section involved and then work back (to the left).

For example, in locating (D) in Fig. 4 from the description given, we first locate the SW 1/4 of the section. We can then forget the other three quarters of the section. Next we locate the NE 1/4 of the SW 1/4. Finally we locate the W 1/2 of that NE 1/4. This procedure may at first seem somewhat confusing, but practice in locating land from descriptions and in writing descriptions will help to clarify it.

Now we can add the description of the area within the section (Fig. 4) to the previous description. It will then read as follows: West 1/2 of the Northeast 1/4 of the Southwest 1/4 of Section 10, Township 3 North, Range 4 East of the Third Principal Meridian. Legal descriptions usually also include the names of the township, county, and state, but they are not essential to a complete description.

The description in its abbreviated form is the W 1/2, NE 1/4, SW 1/4 of Sec. 10. This is a complete description of a specific 20-acre tract of land. It can fit no other tract.

Note in Fig. 4 that the sequence of land areas in the description is arranged in increasing size from left to right--the W 1/2 (20 acres) of the NE 1/4 (40 acres) of the SW 1/4 (160 acres) of Section 10 (640 acres) of Township 3 North, Range 4 East. You cannot locate the correct Section 10 until you have located Township 3 North, Range 4 East; likewise you cannot locate any fraction of Section 10 until you have located Section 10. Therefore, in locating a tract of land or writing a land description, you start with the largest area and work back from right to left.

WHAT CAUSES IRREGULAR TOWNSHIPS AND SECTIONS?

At first glance the rectangular survey may appear to be a perfect solution to the problem of locating, describing, and identifying land. It is a good system, but applying a rectangular system to the curved surface of the earth results in some irregularities, such as would occur if you tried to cover a basketball with postage stamps.

If you will look at a large map or a globe of the earth, you will see that the meridians get closer together as they approach the north and south poles. (In rectangular surveys, the north and south lines are meridian lines.) Therefore, a township cannot be a perfect square.

It is, therefore, impossible for all sections to be perfectly square and to contain 640 acres. You can probably find sections containing more or less than 640 acres in the north and west rows of sections in your township. Most of the other sections will be approximately 640 acres in size. The surveyors were requested to throw all deficiencies or excesses in acreages into the north and west sides of the townships.

Perhaps you know of jogs in roads that follow section lines. They can be seen on maps. Many of them were caused by the surveying procedures used to overcome the difficulty of applying rectangular surveys to the curved surface of the earth. Surveyors were given instructions for using "slip" corners, "jog" corners, and correction lines. These are surveying terms that involve technical surveying procedures. They are mentioned to explain many of the irregularities in surveys, but these particular irregularities were provided for in the survey system and are not caused by surveying errors.

The surveyor was given specific instructions and procedures to follow in surveying each area assigned to him. The technical procedures and instructions for numbering townships and sections and for making corrections and adjustments, were issued by the General Land Office and by Acts of Congress. However, they were not always consistent from area to area.

Another reason for the irregularity in certain townships and sections is that surveyors are human and therefore make mistakes. Occasionally errors in surveying have resulted in townships and sections of odd shapes and sizes.

There is still another reason for irregularities. Where the survey from one principal meridian meets the survey from another, both Irregular townships and sections are sure to occur. The same is true where surveys from two different base lines meet.

Irregular townships and sections also occur along both sides of the large rivers. The river is the meeting place of two different surveys.

Although these irregularities occur, they do not make the rectangular survey system unusable. Even with the irregularities, the system is both definite and useable.

SUMMARY

Land is owned as private property in the United States and is transferred in various ways from one owner to another. This requires some system through which the purchaser can obtain clear title, a title with no legal claims against it. In order to transfer real estate, its location must be positively and specifically described. A legal description is possible since all of the United States has been surveyed.

Two systems of describing farmland have been used. One is known as the metes and bounds and the other as the rectangular survey.

In describing a tract of land by the metes and bounds system, the measurements and locations of boundary lines are described. When permanent markers are used, the system is quite satisfactory. Sometimes markers such as a bank of a stream, a rock, tree, or corner of another farm were used and then difficulties often arose.

Rectangular surveys involved the use of principal meridians, base lines, townships, and sections. North and south lines are the meridian lines and east-west lines are the base lines.

Townships were laid out from the principal meridians and base lines. A regular township is six miles square. The townships were divided into sections, each being one-mile square. Both the townships and sections can be located with reference to their principal meridians and base lines, such as Sec. 10, T-3-N, R-4-E of the 3rd P.M.

A tract of land is located as the fractional part of a section. An example of a 20-acres tract might be the W 1/2 of NE 1/4 of SW 1/4. Its complete description in abbreviated form might be W 1/2, NE 1/4, SW 1/4 of Sec. 10, T-3-N, R-4-E, and the 3rd

P.M.

Irregular townships and sections occur because of the curved surface of the earth. The majority of such irregularities will be found in the north and west rows of sections. Other irregularities appear at the meeting of surveys and as a result of surveyors' errors.

Long or Lineal Measure

12 inches = 1 foot
3 feet = 1 yard
5 1/2 yards = 1 rod
320 rods = 1 mile
5,280 feet = 1 mile

Land or Square Measure

144 sq. inches = 1 sq. foot
9 sq. feet = 1 sq. yard
43,560 sq. feet = 1 acre
160 sq. rods = 1 acre
640 acres = 1 sq. mile
36 sq. miles = 1 township

All dimensions on government plats are given in chains and links. 1 surveyor's chain = 100 links; 100 links = 66 feet; 10 square chains = 1 acre.

A rod is also known as a perch or pole.

What are the dimensions, in miles and in rods, of the following tracts of land?

1. A square 40 acres
2. A square 640 acres
3. A square 160 acres
