

Soil Conservation Banquet March 26

A record crowd of 300 persons is expected for the Hardin Soil Conservation District banquet to be held, March 26, at the Youth building in Eldora starting at 6:30 p.m.

Featured on the program will be the presentation of conservation achievement awards to district winners. Two Hardin county co-operators are presented awards for outstanding accomplishments in planning and applying conservation on their farms. Last year's award winners were Ernest Barz, Eldora and Bernnard Reece, New Providence.

Herb Plambeck, farm director of WHO and WHO-TV, will be principal speaker for the evening. He will speak on the topic of the "Farm dilemma."

Plambeck has been active in conservation events for several years. He is the founder of the National Plowing Matches and served as director of the National Soil Conservation Field Days for 5 years.
