Recently Completed

The recently constructed gully stabilization structure in the Big Wyacondah Watershed project benefitted heavily from the mid-June rains that hit Davis County. This structure, on the Dale Dixon farm, southwest of Bloomfield, was completed three weeks ago and the water is now less than five feet below the capacity level. This particular structure will cover about $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land and is one of many such structures to be built in the 36,000 acre watershed project.
