

Farm Science Is Practiced—

Remodel Dairy Barn

Ruth Schwenneker takes time out to let a new calf suck on her finger but her dog, Jerry, disdainfully disregards the whole procedure. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schwenneker are making a trip through the newly rebuilt dairy barn on Tyden farm No. 2 which they tenant. They're mighty proud of the new silvered iron fixtures on the 28 stalls, the sound, clean concrete floor, the new milking machine, the milk room with hot and cold water, wash tank and electric separator. And they know from the experience on other Tyden farms that these improvements aren't luxuries—that they'll pay for themselves many times over. (Lock photo, Kayenay engraving)
