Milton Jordening Honored For Soil Conservation Work

Milton Jordening of rural Eldora is one of the winners in the 1968 Iowa Soil Conservation Achievement Awards Program, sponsored by the Des Moines Register and Tribune.

The program is designed to honor farmers and teachers for outstanding accomplishments in the field of soil and water conservation. Winners in the program represented a total of 77 counties.

Jordening, who was named a winner in the owner-operated or family-operated farm division, will now compete for regional honors. The regional winners will then compete for state honors. Jordening farms northeast of Eldora in Clay township.

Co-chairmen for the contest are Wilson T. Moon, state conservationist for the U. S. Soil Conservation service, and William H Greiner, director of the the State Soil Conservation Committee. The two announced the winners Sunday.
